FACILITATOR:

Patrick Hunt

I'm an Architect turned Gardening and Nature Educator and I have been providing workshops and classes, consultations and designs for all things Biodiversity and Gardening related since 2015. I am also on the panel with the Heritage in Schools Scheme.

This face-to-face course will be taking place in Dublin West Education Support Centre and is the last of a three-part series with Patrick Hunt on Biodiversity and Gardening in Schools.

During this session, we will continue the work on the raised bed in the outdoor classroom of Dublin West Education Support Centre with the sensory planting from last term. We will be learning about growing a variety of Spring bulbs to give interest from February to June and how to use these in the school grounds. We will learn which are best for pollinators and how to integrate them into existing planting and growing them in large pots or tubs.

*Suitable for all school staff & parents in Primary & Post Primary Schools -
Applicable to anyone interested in Gardening and Nature*
